Dear Friends,

What an amazing year we had in 2017.

As a friend of BARCS, you've helped us not only grow our programs, but save more animals than ever before. Through your generous donations, adoptions, volunteered hours and community outreach you've been a part of saving lives this year. We couldn't have done it without each and every one of you.

The daily miracles that we experience at BARCS wouldn't be possible without the support and participation of our community. This year we focused heavily on making our programs and services reach beyond our shelter walls. While taking care of 11,000 animals is a big job, we know that alone it is not enough to effect change in Baltimore. In order to save more lives and decrease our intake at the shelter, we need to make an impact not only with homeless animals, but owned animals too—and the people who love them.

This year, thanks to a generous grant and the help of many volunteers, BARCS hosted a free community pet day in the Cherry Hill neighborhood. In addition to our long-standing, monthly low-cost clinic, this popup opportunity allowed us to provide pet owners in underserved communities with access to free vaccinations, free food, a free training lesson and free pet supplies. That sunny afternoon, more than 300 owned pets were provided services. Lasting relationships were made between our team and pet owners that needed continued support. You can read about our community clinics on page 4.

Programs and services that help outside of our shelter walls inform the work we do inside as well. It's a domino effect. When pet owners in our community have the resources they need, less animals wind up homeless. In 2017, with less animals being surrendered to our shelter, we were able to focus heavily on saving animals with medical needs. Our Franky Fund sent a record 900 animals to emergency and specialty medical clinics for the care they needed. This program is special because of its many levels-it embodies the phrase "it takes a village." The Franky Fund is comprised of a network of local veterinary hospitals that provide discounted care to our organization, volunteers who transport animals to and from these clinics, and is supported by private donors. This program—and all the lives saved by it—would not be possible without everyone coming together.

I'm so thankful to our thousands of generous donors, so proud of the accomplishments of our programs, and so happy to serve Baltimore's animals alongside an incredible team of staff and volunteers. But above all, we're so excited to do even more—save even more—in 2018. Thirteen years ago, when I walked into this very same building, only 2% of the animals made it out alive. This year we saved a record 89%, but we aren't stopping there! With your continued support, we can grant more second chances and happy endings for Baltimore's very-deserving animals.

Choose adoption, volunteer your time, support an animal in need—be part of the change!

Sincerely,

Jennifer Brause Executive Director and Founder

Chart Notes:

BARCS calculates Positive Yearly Outcomes and follows record keeping practices as set forth by the Asilomar Accords, a universal data matrix for shelters and rescues to track and report critical data. Asilomar Accords does not include owner requested euthanasia for unhealthy or untreatable pets when calculating shelter euthanasia percentages (see chart note 4).

1) As the largest animal shelter in our state, BARCS relies heavily on our partnerships with nearby shelters and rescue groups (both locally and nationally) to aid with our high-volume intake. These organizations take not only cats and dogs, but also exotic pets, farm animals and wildlife animals that come to our shelter.

2) Previously operated by Best Friends Animal Society staff, BARCS took over the Community Cat Program on July 1, 2016. As a humane way to manage the outdoor cat population, BARCS traps, vaccinates, spays/neuters, and provides additional medical care as needed to outdoor cats then returns them to their original outdoor homes.

3) BARCS is an open admission shelter, which means that we take in and care for all animals that come to our door. Because of this, we get dozens of critically sick and injured animals daily. Our staff veterinarians and Franky Fund partner clinics work to save the lives of all treatable animals, but sometimes, despite our best efforts, they succumb to their injuries/illnesses. In addition, during the summer months, our shelter takes in hundreds of neonatal kittens. While most of these newborns are able to be saved with round-the-clock care and bottle feeding, some—despite our greatest efforts—are unable to thrive.

4) Owner requested euthanasia is a low-cost public service that BARCS provides to Baltimore City pet owners in need. This program is for pets that come to our shelter that are terminally sick, suffering, are unable to be treated or have a dangerous bite history.
BARCS' medical team and program staff evaluate all requests for euthanasia, and if we feel those animals can be saved, they are.

5) The most common reasons for euthanasia are due to aggression, animals that are seriously sick and unable to be medically treated, and animals who have reached the end of their lifespan. Also factoring into this selection is cost-to-save, foster availability and shelter space for longterm, intensive care. BARCS saved all healthy and friendly animals again this year and continues to save more and more medical cases each year thanks to donations to our medical care funds.

Giving Back

BARCS' monthly low-cost clinic and pop-up free community clinics are helping pet owners and reducing the number of homeless animals in Baltimore.

A s loving pet owners, we want to keep our pets healthy, happy and free from pain and suffering. Saving lives, improving health and well-being, and building a strong community are all important parts of BARCS' mission. In recent years, our organization has focused on creating and growing programs that help pet owners in underserved areas of our community. BARCS' vaccine clinic provides recurring low-cost services to hundreds of pets and their owners each month. This program is BARCS' way of giving back, and of understanding the unmet needs of the people and pets of Baltimore. This popular monthly program helps families in Baltimore City care for their animal's needs, serving nearly 3,000 pets and their owners each year. Pet owners can also have their pets vaccinated and microchipped, as well as purchase or renew their Baltimore City Pet License.

Ben Harris is one of the many volunteers working at the monthly clinics. He said, "I enjoy volunteering at the vaccine clinic because it helps both animals and the community at the same time. It's an important service that is provided at a low cost to residents. It also offers staff and volunteers a great opportunity to educate people about responsible pet ownership and about the many lifesaving programs BARCS provides for the community."

The clinics are made possible through the generosity of our supporters. In 2017, thanks to generous grants and donations, BARCS was able to offer two additional pop-up clinics in underserved, "vet desert" communities where transportation is limited. At these clinics, all services including spay and neuter were free to the public. In April of 2017, we visited our neighbors in the Cherry Hill community with an event we called "Free Community Dog Day." Hundreds of families and their dogs visited our pop-up clinic in the grassy field at New Era Academy High School. Thanks to a grant from Maddie's Fund, dogs were provided vaccines, leashes and collars, food, vouchers for spay and neuter, and animal-positive activities for children. With the necessary funding, we hope to continue to provide these additional clinics in the future, as well as our monthly low-cost clinic.

Focusing on programs that help owned pets in our community, not only extends our lifesaving reach past our shelter walls, but also helped reduce the number of homeless animals entering our shelter in 2017.

t's more than just statistics, every single number is a life saved, an hour volunteered or a dollar fundraised to help homeless animals in our community. And that's what BARCS is all about, thousands of individual moments, choices and successes that make up the bigger picture. This year we took in 11,703 animals. Cats for Hire!

The BARCS Working Cat program is finding non-traditional homes for hard-to-place shelter cats.

Back in the days when most families lived on farms, animals had jobs to do. Horses pulled plows, dogs herded cattle and cats kept the mice population in check. These days, most of us keep animals as pets. They're treated like family. A pet cat will likely be found lounging lazily on a chair or sprawled on the floor being warmed by the sun's rays – until the sound of the can opener rouses it from slumber. But that's not the case for all cats. At our shelter, we meet many cats that exhibit traits not suited for domestic living—we call these our "Working Cats."

This year, 95 cats were saved because of the Working Cat Program. Inky (pictured left) is one of those cats. Before entering our care, Inky was found living in a house that was piled high with refuse. When humans came near, he lashed out angrily in fear. Our staff kept a close watch on him at the shelter to see if his behavior would change, but it didn't. It was going to be challenging to find an adoptive home for this sharp four-year-old kitty.

Like many business owners, Tom Foster and his business partner Colin Marshall were battling a rodent problem at Diamondback Brewing Company here in Baltimore, Maryland. And they knew they had to do something about it. Their 7,000-square-foot city brewing facility was warm and filled with the barley used to brew the beer. "It was mouse heaven," Tom said. Traps baited with cheese or peanut butter had proved ineffective, and they didn't want to use a chemical solution around the barley if they could avoid it. So, when the BARCS Working Cat Program contacted them and told them about Inky, they decided to give him a try.

"The first day that he was here, he was hissing and really unhappy," said Tom. "I thought, 'Oh, I don't know if this is going to work out.' But then, at the flip of a switch, he settled in. I don't think he's hissed once since that day." Within a week, Inky caught half a dozen mice, and today, the brewery's rodent problem is history. "We haven't had a single mouse problem since Inky came," Tom said.

Before BARCS developed the Working Cat Program, a cat like Inky didn't have many options. Some cats can't be placed in a home because they won't use a litter box, or are feral and aren't socialized. For these cats, the Working Cat Program can be a lifesaver. The program places difficult-to-adopt cats on farms, and at warehouses, nurseries and other commercial settings where their natural talents can be put to good use. The BARCS Working Cat Program spays or neuters the cat for free, and surgically implants an identifying microchip. Adopters provide food, shelter and medical care to the cats. It is an interdependent relationship that works for all parties.

As for Inky, "He's gotten extremely friendly," said Tom. "He'll let me pick him up now. He'll even jump on my lap when he wants to be petted." Inky now has his own 'office' with a nameplate, and soon he'll have a brew named in his honor.

The Working Cat program is funded partially by grants from the Petco Foundation and Best Friends Animal Society. The remainder of the expenses are covered through private donations from supporters like you. For more information on how you can adopt a Working Cat or help the program, please visit www.barcs.org/programs.

Meet the Foster: Ara Storlie

BARCS Foster Ara Storlie cared for 86 cats and kittens, over the course of a year, in her home, making her our top foster in 2017. Foster care volunteers provide temporary care for kittens, puppies, dogs and cats. Fosters, like Ara, give a second chance to animals who needs temporary relief from the shelter as they grow or heal from injury and illness.

"Being a foster is not always easy and there are heartbreaks along the way, but it is worth it to give the youngest, sickest and most vulnerable animals a chance to thrive," says Ara. And that's exactly what she did this year for a kitten named Zoie. Zoie came into BARCS only two weeks old with such a severe upper repiratory infection in her little body, we didn't know if she would make it. Ara welcomed Zoie to her home, hoping for a full recovery, but prepared for the worst. With supportive care and Ara's attentiveness, Zoie made it! Even though Ara had grown very fond of little Zoie over her weeks of recovery, she found her a wonderful adopter. "When one foster goes to their forever home there is always another one in need of help. I rejoice with each adoption because it gives me the opportunity to help another animal," she says.

A big thank you to Ara and all of our incredible fosters who opened their homes to animals in need in 2017!

Giving Them a Second Chance

Saving lives is truly a community effort. BARCS' Franky Fund Program partners with local veterinary clinics to provide medical care to sick and injured animals.

This year, BARCS' Franky Fund cared for nearly 900 animals with extraordinary medical needs. Named after Franky, a special puppy who was the first recipient of care through this fund, the Franky Fund provides outside emergency and specialized medical care to homeless animals that enter our shelter, like Trooper (pictured right).

Sweet Trooper was found wandering on the side of a city road his front leg was terribly injured. Trooper was fumbling between dragging it and trying to hold it close to his body. A good neighbor compassionately picked him up and brought him to BARCS. He received medical treatment through the Franky Fund, and nourishment and love at our shelter. Trooper is now fully healed and is tremendously loved by his new family. His story is just one of many this year.

The success of this program is made possible by gifts from individual donors and partnerships with local veterinary hospitals and specialty clinics. These Franky Fund partner hospitals provide services to BARCS' homeless animals at a generous discount to our shelter. As we strive to save more animals each year, we've welcomed new partners and thank our veteran partners for growing with us. Because of our Franky Fund partners' willingness to help, BARCS was able to say 'yes' to more animals who needed our help in 2017.

A Day in the Life: BARCS Spay/Neuter Surgery Team

BARCS is a high-volume shelter. That means that as we work to save more lives each year, our programs must grow to meet our needs...even if the square footage of our building does not. If you didn't know where to look for our surgical "wing," you might miss it. What was once a series of closets, is now a high-volume spay/neuter surgery program, fixing more than 5,000 animals in 2017. Because every animal that gets adopted from our shelter leaves spay/neutered, along with serving a robust TNR Community Cats Program (TNR: trap, neuter, return), our team is performing up to 25 surgeries each day, seven days a week.

The surgery team begins their day early, often before the sun rises. Each of their furry patients are prepped according to their individual medical needs. Routine spay and neuter surgeries take up most of the day, but being an open-admission shelter means that emergencies can arise at any time. The team remains flexible to what each day brings--always ready to save lives.

In addition to spay/neuter surgery, the surgical team performs operations on injured and sick animals as well as sedated grooming and dentistry. In-house procedures such as removing unsavable injured eyes and limbs, or cleaning and debriding wounds, allows BARCS to save more animal's lives each year. We are proud to have such a talented and dedicated surgery team here at BARCS.

How big are their hearts? Our BARCS surgical team made national news in both 2016 and 2017 for their extra special bedside manner. Check out our Facebook page to see them singing and gently dancing with animals waking up from surgery: www.facebook.com/ BARCSbaltimore LEADERS of the PACK

The BARCS Leaders of the Pack are a special group of people who understand that they aren't just providing support—they are saving lives. BARCS' Leaders of the Pack have made generous monetary contributions of $1,000 or more in calendar year 2017 to help us continue our work finding homes for Baltimore's homeless pets. Through their donations, Leaders of the Pack members provide the critical resources necessary to support and expand BARCS' programs, allowing us to save more lives each year. Thank you all for your support.

Miracle Maker Spotlight: PetSmart Charities

We'd like to recognize PetSmart Charities for their ongoing financial support of BARCS' mission and programs. In 2017, PetSmart Charities awarded BARCS a leadership gift of $266,000. This grant supports two of BARCS' lifesaving programs. First, our Managed Intake Program is helping pet owners by providing or locating the resources they need to prevent surrender to the shelter. Additionally, PetSmart funds our Spay and Neuter Program (page 9), which manages pet overpopulation in our community. In 2017, our surgery team performed 5,792 spay/neuter surgeries—a record number for our organization! Throughout this report, you will find additional stories and data that support the importance of this grant. Thank you, PetSmart Charities, for all you do for BARCS and the Baltimore Community at large.

Cat Hair: That's What's in for Spring!

Another successful Pawject Runway gets animals adopted and raises critical funds for our shelter.

or five years, BARCS has partnered with the Show Your Soft Side anti-animal abuse campaign to bring Pawject Runway to Baltimore. This star-studded event pairs adoptable animals from our shelter with big names from the NFL to the soccer field for a fashion show like no other-or as we like to say, "This ain't your mama's fashion show!" This year, more than 1,200 people attended the event sponsored by Pet Valu and held at Royal Farms Arena. The runway show kicked off with a heartfelt message from BARCS board member and general manager of the Royal Farms Arena, Frank Remesch, and concluded with a special surprise from Philadelphia Eagle and former Baltimore Raven Torrey Smith. Torrey and his wife Chanel had pledged to cover all of the adoption fees for each animal on the runway. The audience roared with applause and the adoption applications came flooding in.

All of the animals found homes. Big-hearted Baltimore Raven, Ronnie Stanley, adopted one of the four-footed models, Rico, to add to his furry BARCS alumni family. Baltimore Raven, Alex Lewis, already has a full rescue house, so his sister adopted his runway companion Chan—the top hat wearing puppy that slept in Alex's arms as he walked the runway. And, this year's Junior "Softie," Avery Lippe, convinced her dad that Connor, the scruffy who-knows-what mix, was going home with them!

In total, more than $130,000 was raised that evening to save the lives of the homeless and abused animals of Baltimore City. A big thank you to the volunteers, foster families, sponsors and attendees that made the 5th annual Pawject Runway a success. We are honored each year to work together with Show Your Soft Side on this event, but more importantly in our fight to end animal abuse in Baltimore. This lifesaving partnership extends beyond the catwalk and into our community. Thank you for your ongoing support.

The 5th annual Pawject runway was cochaired by BARCS board members Frank Remesch and John Rallo, with a lead sponsorship gift secured by Joe Dent, BARCS board member and chief store operations officer at Pet Valu.

Fundraiser Spotlight: Cory Grossman

When you pair two things you love, golf and helping homeless animals, raising money is both enjoyable and successful!

For three years, BARCS supporter and volunteer Cory Grossman has been planning and hosting the annual Paws at the Point golf tournament. For Cory, it was an easy fit to marry his two biggest passions to create a fun and lifesaving afternoon on the links.

"After I adopted my dog, Lola, from Tara's Animal House Rescue by way of BARCS, I was inspired to create a fundraiser that could help save more dogs like her," said Cory. "I recognized that the two things that BARCS needs most is adopters and donations. I had already taken the first step by making Lola a part of my family, and that experience inspired me to try my hand at the second part: fundraising."

And so, together with his wife Stephanie, Cory decided to host the very first Paws at the Point golf tournament in 2015—and it was a smash hit! The event raised $11,000 for BARCS, making Cory a top fundraiser, eager to do it again the next year. Along with his committee consisting of his father, Paul Grossman, and his co-worker, Jeff Crosley, this unstoppable team plans to raise even more money this upcoming year.

In total, Paws at the Point has raised more than $40,000 over the years, which has translated into food, shelter, medical care and lifesaving programs for the animals we serve. We are incredibly thankful to Cory, Stephanie along all of our supporters who hosted fundraisers and donation drives on our behalf in 2017.

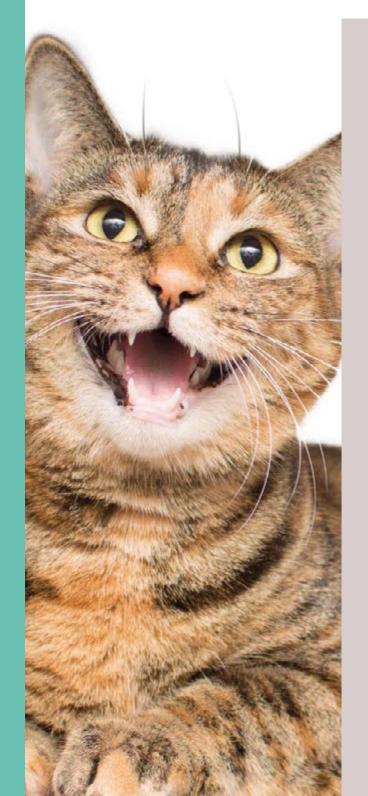

If you have a passion, a great idea, or a knack for throwing a great party, we hope that you too will consider creating a fundraiser for our shelter! Learn more online at www.barcs.org/give.

Awards and Recognition

BARCS wins the Lifesaving Luminary Award at the 2017 Best Friends National Conference and receives special acknowledgement from the Baltimore Orioles organization!

Lifesaving Luminary Award:

In 2017, BARCS was honored at the annual Best Friends National Conference, winning the 2017 Lifesaving Luminary Award. This award recognizes a shelter that is making big changes within their organization and community, as well as being a leader in innovation and overcoming challenges. Thirteen years ago, BARCS was created because Baltimore's animals deserved better. With a 2% save rate at the time of our inception, there was nowhere to go but up. With the support of our community, BARCS has been growing and improving ever since. With saving lives at the forefront of our mission, BARCS welcomes new programs and sheltering concepts year after year, in order to do the best for the animals in our care. Thank you to Best Friends Animal Society for recognizing BARCS, and to all of our supporters who have helped us save more and more lives each year.

Birdland Community Heroes:

The Baltimore Orioles Birdland Community Heroes program recognizes local individuals who demonstrate heroism through their positive contributions to their community in fields that care for, serve, protect and improve the lives of others who are most in need. In 2017, the Baltimore Orioles recognized BARCS Founder and Executive Director Jennifer Brause for her service to the animals and people of the Baltimore Community. In Jennifer's honor, the Orioles generously donated $2,500 to BARCS to support our livesaving mission. Making HomeHappenBonded pair Nina and Rexa just needed a second chance

Defore Nina and Rexa were Dsurrendered to BARCS, they had little human contact. For ten years, these litter mates lived a majority of their life outside in the backyard of a Baltimore row home. It had been a long time since they had veterinary care.

Even as we make great strides in the overall welfare of our city's animals, far too many pets in Baltimore aren't considered pets at all—much less family members.

Nina and Rexa were "outdoor dogs" for a decade. They came to our shelter with a lot of fears: the fear of being touched, the fear of strangers and the fear of anything new. We knew it was going to be an uphill journey to find them the happy ending they deserved—What did a happy ending look like for these girls?

For more than two months, our staff and volunteers patiently worked with Nina and Rexa. Progress was made in tiny increments. First, Rexa began seeking human affection. She figured out that pets were pretty great. She learned that a leash meant going on a walk outside where she could sniff and enjoy the sunshine. Rexa began encouraging Nina to try the same things. She would nudge Nina's face and body towards gentle human hands. Through hundreds of hours of specialized socialization and behavior plans, Nina and Rexa made tremendous progress.

The change was most evident when they were resting in their shelter kennel. When they first arrived they would lay on each other in order to hide. Towards the end of their stay, they eagerly approached the door, tails wagging, big smiles, loving every second of attention. That's when we knew they were indeed ready to find their forever home.

Day 90 was the magical day that they caught the eye of a visiting adopter. Candice A. wasn't specially looking for a senior dog, much less two, but she decided to take a chance on the girls. She reports that Nina and Rexa are doing well, progressing more and more each day.

At BARCS they learned to be household pets, at home they learned to be "family."

Tales with Tails Reading Program

n the summer of 2017, Orioles pitcher Kevin Gausman and his wife, Taylor, helped launch a new program at BARCS to promote childhood reading and social interaction with shelter pets. The Tales with Tails Program pairs children with animal reading buddies.

As a former teacher, Taylor understands the challenges that children face when learning to read, especially the pressure they experience when reading out loud in front of their classmates. The Tales with Tails program helps to alleviate that pressure by allowing kids to practice reading in a safe space with supportive listeners.

And, sharing stories with feline friends does more than just improve kids' reading ability. It also gives the shelter cats an important opportunity to engage in social situations, which ultimately helps them become (even) better candidates for

Orioles Pet Calendar:

The Baltimore Orioles have helped to raise more than $330,000 for BARCS over the last seven years through sales of the annual Orioles Pet Calendar. In 2017, $70,000 was raised through sales online, in our shelter and at the ballpark. A big thank you to the Baltimore Orioles for both your community and fundraising support of our mission!

adoption. Cats who are shy or fearful, a common issue for cats in shelters, learn to relax around new people.

At the official launch of the program, a young student from the Boys & Girls Club of Metropolitan Baltimore entered our "Meow Manor" cat room. Child-sized seats were set up in front of the cages of friendly cats. Kat, a stray cat who was fearful and not interested in interacting with people, did not have a seat set up for a reading buddy. But, the student insisted that her experience with the alley cats in her neighborhood would make them fast friends. We loved her spirit and agreed to let her move her seat to Kat's cage. She sat quietly and read, never peering into the cage or searching for her reading buddy.

In less than an hour of calm interactions through the non-threatening action of reading, Kat was at the front of her cage, stretching and slowly blinking. "She just needed a good friend," the student told our team.

The impact of this program has helped 76 children in 2017, and will continue into 2018. All children who participate in the reading visits receive a complimentary book with a pet-positive message and two tickets to a baseball game. This program is funded by OriolesREACH and Orioles Charitable Foundation. A big thank you to our community partners for making this new program a huge success for both children and animals in Baltimore City.

Be the Change

Passion, compassion and the willingness to affect change, that's what makes a BARCS volunteer.

t takes a lot of hands and a lot of big hearts to rescue more than 11,000 animals each year. BARCS relies heavily on volunteers to help us care for our animals and succeed in finding them positive outcomes. From intake to adoption, volunteers are there every step of the way, showing our animals compassion and love. Each and every department and program in our shelter is aided by volunteer hours. We simply couldn't do it without them.

In 2017, more than 600 unique individuals gave their time to BARCS, along with dozens of corporate and community groups. Collectively, our volunteers logged 32,920 hours this year, a value worth more than $800,000. Their donation of time has allowed our funding to stay focused on animal programs and care.

Thank you, volunteers. The compassion you show to pet owners in need, the lives of the animals you enrich and save every day, and your dedication to Baltimore's animal welfare community, make you an outstanding example for generations to come.

*Significant lifesaving grants were awarded to BARCS at the end of Fiscal Year 2017. While this funding has been recorded in the FY 2017 budget (due to deposit date), it is allocated to support shelter programs in FY 2018. There have been many changes to BARCS over the past decade, from new programs and projects, to staff hired and a large increase in adoptions and other positive outcomes—we are always transforming and expanding to save lives. But, we are proud of one thing that has always remained the same: our financial responsibility, to both the animals and our donors.

In the chart 2 (opposite page) you will see just how reliant our organization is on private donations, event attendance and grant funding (restricted private donations, often program specific) from our community. In fiscal year 2017, BARCS' fundraising expense percentage (chart 1, below) was a record low 3.6%, meaning that for every $1 you give, $0.96 is allocated directly to helping animals in need.

Miracle Maker Spotlight: Petco Foundation

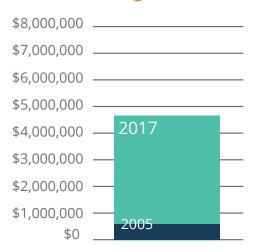

We'd like to recognize the Petco Foundation for their on-going financial support of BARCS' mission and programs. In 2017, the Petco Foundation awarded BARCS a two-year Lifesaving Grant of $500,000. This grant supports three of BARCS' programs: the Training and Enrichment Program (pictured), the Community Cats (TNR) Program and the on-going efforts of our Offsite Adoptions Program, a program that finds alternative setting and events to find adopters for homeless animals. Throughout this report, you will find stories and data that support the importance of this grant. Thank you, Petco Foundation, for all you do for BARCS and the Baltimore Community at large.
